Fusion offers a number of creative broadband solutions for the home office worker.

Basic ADSL connectivity can provide an internet connection fast enough for basic VPN or VoIP traffic, as well as providing access to email and websites.

With an increasing number of data-hungry applications available to the home office, even a single user may require more sophisticated solutions such as an ADSL Office Max service. For optimum connectivity with the fastest upstream rate, a dedicated data line such as SDSL is available in a number of contention ratios.
